

CV Ruth_Buckley MBA, B.Sc, PMP

Ruth is currently Head of Information systems with Cork city Council and has worked in management positions within local government since 1998. She manages a department of 20 staff responsible for over 1000 users across the city.

Ruth completed an MBA in project management with Henley Management College. Her MBA dissertation investigated project and program management within the local authority sector. She holds BSc(Hon's) Degree in Computer Science from University College Cork. Before joining the public sector, Ruth worked for 11 years, on a variety of business and IT projects within the Information Technology section of Bank of Ireland. While there she completed a certified diploma in management and financial accounting with the ACCA.

In 1997 she achieved project management professional certification and since then has participated as a exam writer for the Institute of Project Management, an assessor for International Project Management Association and is a guest lecturer on the project management diploma and business masters courses at University College Cork.

She has featured in articles in Computer Scope and is a contributor to the Irish project management newsletter. She has presented at various conferences.